Eleven artists joined the Depot Arts Center in 2009 and are exhibiting their works through Feb. 27 at the historic gallery in an 1881 Santa Fe train depot at 2069 W. Powers Ave., Littleton.

Their art includes oil, pastel, sculpture, watercolor, pottery and mixed media. The show was juried by nationally recognized landscape painter Marsha Wooley, who teaches in the art department at Arapahoe Community College. She conducted a gallery talk at the opening reception.

Included: Pat Dall, Bob Dando, Julia Grundmeier, Lena Owens, JoAnn Rauschkolb, Jerry Rubey, Owen Schooler, Don Stone, Iris Turrell, Marietta VanOrman and Marsha Wright.

Artists who want to join this longstanding group are juried into the Littleton Fine Arts Guild after application and submission of examples of their work. For information on membership or other Depot matters, call 303-795-0781 during gallery hours.

Gallery hours at the Depot Arts Center and Gallery are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesdays through Saturdays.
