About the Depot Art Gallery

The historic Depot Art Gallery is a restored 1885 Santa Fe train station adapted to use as a gallery, which opened in 1978. It was enhanced by the addition of a renovated 1890's caboose, which rests on a short section of track north of the red and green building. Located on a site near the railroad tracks, it is a unique marriage of community spirit and the arts. There are regular monthly exhibits by members of the Littleton Fine Arts Guild. The Depot Art Center and Gallery is under the administration of the Museum and the City of Littleton and directed by the Littleton Fine Arts Guild.
